Terms and Conditions

Permissions and Copyrights

- 1. General - You are responsible for any legal issues that arise from your video submission. Please ensure that you have the rights to submit your video to GIC Private Limited (“GIC”) and to grant GIC the right to use all materials contained in the video as further set out in Section 2 “License” below. Further guidance is contained in the remaining sections of this document, but nothing in this document is meant to be considered as legal advice. You remain fully responsible for complying with all laws that apply to your participation in the competition.
- 2. License – Between GIC and yourself, you retain ownership rights over the videos you submit in the competition. However, by submitting your video for the competition you grant to GIC Private Limited an irrevocable, perpetual, royalty free, worldwide license to use, adapt, copy, distribute, broadcast, advertise and publicise all materials contained in your video, both in original and adapted form, in full or in part, in various media of GIC’s choosing (for example public screenings, the Internet and through GIC’s various media channels) for GIC’s business purposes (for example to showcase GIC’s educational initiatives). GIC also reserves the right to publicise the videos you submit in this competition in other internal or public-facing programmes, events or platforms beyond the “Make FinLIT!” Financial Literacy Video Competition, including without limitation any communications and outreach initiatives by GIC.
- 3. Featuring people - You are responsible for respecting the rights of people shown in your videos, including getting their consent in writing before filming them. When getting their consent, share with them why you are taking their videos and how the videos may be used. If the people featured in your video are other students or are under the age of 21, do also inform and obtain written consent from the parents of these individuals whom you will be involving in the shoot. For videos that include groups of people where obtaining consent may not be practical (for example, walking outdoors in the park), consider using video technology to blur the images of these other people so that you respect their privacy.

Permissions and Copyrights

- 4. Using music/video clips/graphics - If using music/video clips/graphics in your video, do make sure that you have the rights from the owner of the music/video clips/graphics to do so. Not all music/video clips/graphics that can be downloaded from the Internet is free to use, and many such music tracks/video clips/graphics still require permission from the owner of the music/video clips/graphics to be included in videos and/or for you to acknowledge the owner of the music/video clips/graphics in your video. If it is too difficult to obtain permission from the owner of the music/video clips/graphics, consider creating your own music/video clips/graphics. If using music/video clips/graphics from another source, do read any user agreement and media usage policy that applies to that music track/video clips/graphics to ensure that you can use it for the objective of this competition where selected entries will be made available for public viewing on GIC's social media platforms and other online channels for publicity and educational purposes. GIC reserves the right to request for documentation indicating that you have the rights to use third-party music/videos/graphics from the third-party owner.
- 5. Originality - You must ensure that the video you submitted is an original work, as copying the work of others will give rise to legal claims of intellectual property infringement which you will be responsible for.

Terms and Conditions

Personal Data

1. Personal data provided in the registration and video submission form by participants or otherwise collected in this competition will be used by GIC for the purposes relating to the competition only (including to communicate/correspond with the participants and to administer and facilitate the competition) and treated as confidential, except those names which may be made public for the purpose of public voting of entries and/or published on GIC's social media or other appropriate medium according to the terms and conditions of the competition.
2. Personal data provided by participants will be retained only for as long as required for the purpose of the competition or its related purposes. Names of the winners will be published according to the terms and conditions of the competition.
3. Photographs and/or video recordings may be taken of participants who attend activities related to the competition in person, and used and disclosed for GIC's marketing and promotional purposes. All personal data collected in relation to this competition will be processed in accordance with GIC's Privacy Policy, available at <https://www.gic.com.sg/privacy-statement/>.
